

Nonfiction
Picks
Anne

Nonfiction
Picks
Anne

Nonfiction
Picks
Anne

Nonfiction
Picks
Anne

2019

2019

2019

2019

The Tiger
by John Vaillant

The grisly rampage of a man-eating Siberian tiger and the effort to trap it frame this suspenseful and majestically narrated introduction to a world that few people, even Russians, are familiar with.

All You Can Ever Know
by Nicole Chung

This raw memoir about growing up as a transracial adoptee will reverberate with anyone who yearns to belong. Chung writes about identity, race, motherhood, and her journey to find her true self.

The Yellow House
by Sarah Broom

Describes the author's upbringing in a New Orleans East house, tracing a century of family history and the impact of class, race and Hurricane Katrina on her sense of identity.

The Feather Thief
by Kirk Wallace Johnson

Way more interesting than you'd think a book about a guy who stole some dead birds could possibly be, this is a remarkably compelling story of obsession and history.

A Fire Story
by Brian Fies

In 2017, Fies and his wife, Karen, lost their home to the Sonoma County wildfires. Without pleading or preaching, this affecting record guides readers through the experience of enormous loss, then out through the other side.

Moonbound
by Johathan Fetter-Vorm

Alternating chapters informatively and elegantly trace a chronicle of humans reaching the moon.

The Tiger
by John Vaillant

The grisly rampage of a man-eating Siberian tiger and the effort to trap it frame this suspenseful and majestically narrated introduction to a world that few people, even Russians, are familiar with.

All You Can Ever Know
by Nicole Chung

This raw memoir about growing up as a transracial adoptee will reverberate with anyone who yearns to belong. Chung writes about identity, race, motherhood, and her journey to find her true self.

The Yellow House
by Sarah Broom

Describes the author's upbringing in a New Orleans East house, tracing a century of family history and the impact of class, race and Hurricane Katrina on her sense of identity.

The Feather Thief
by Kirk Wallace Johnson

Way more interesting than you'd think a book about a guy who stole some dead birds could possibly be, this is a remarkably compelling story of obsession and history.

A Fire Story
by Brian Fies

In 2017, Fies and his wife, Karen, lost their home to the Sonoma County wildfires. Without pleading or preaching, this affecting record guides readers through the experience of enormous loss, then out through the other side.

Moonbound
by Johathan Fetter-Vorm

Alternating chapters informatively and elegantly trace a chronicle of humans reaching the moon.

The Tiger
by John Vaillant

The grisly rampage of a man-eating Siberian tiger and the effort to trap it frame this suspenseful and majestically narrated introduction to a world that few people, even Russians, are familiar with.

All You Can Ever Know
by Nicole Chung

This raw memoir about growing up as a transracial adoptee will reverberate with anyone who yearns to belong. Chung writes about identity, race, motherhood, and her journey to find her true self.

The Yellow House
by Sarah Broom

Describes the author's upbringing in a New Orleans East house, tracing a century of family history and the impact of class, race and Hurricane Katrina on her sense of identity.

The Feather Thief
by Kirk Wallace Johnson

Way more interesting than you'd think a book about a guy who stole some dead birds could possibly be, this is a remarkably compelling story of obsession and history.

A Fire Story
by Brian Fies

In 2017, Fies and his wife, Karen, lost their home to the Sonoma County wildfires. Without pleading or preaching, this affecting record guides readers through the experience of enormous loss, then out through the other side.

Moonbound
by Johathan Fetter-Vorm

Alternating chapters informatively and elegantly trace a chronicle of humans reaching the moon.

The Tiger
by John Vaillant

The grisly rampage of a man-eating Siberian tiger and the effort to trap it frame this suspenseful and majestically narrated introduction to a world that few people, even Russians, are familiar with.

All You Can Ever Know
by Nicole Chung

This raw memoir about growing up as a transracial adoptee will reverberate with anyone who yearns to belong. Chung writes about identity, race, motherhood, and her journey to find her true self.

The Yellow House
by Sarah Broom

Describes the author's upbringing in a New Orleans East house, tracing a century of family history and the impact of class, race and Hurricane Katrina on her sense of identity.

The Feather Thief
by Kirk Wallace Johnson

Way more interesting than you'd think a book about a guy who stole some dead birds could possibly be, this is a remarkably compelling story of obsession and history.

A Fire Story
by Brian Fies

In 2017, Fies and his wife, Karen, lost their home to the Sonoma County wildfires. Without pleading or preaching, this affecting record guides readers through the experience of enormous loss, then out through the other side.

Moonbound
by Johathan Fetter-Vorm

Alternating chapters informatively and elegantly trace a chronicle of humans reaching the moon.